

In The Beginning

You got Dawkins standing on a pedestal shouting at the creatures
'God is dead'
You got people thinking that the scientists all agree the notion
'God's not there'
But please tell me, can this theory explain how life ever first began?
Can such genius, precise details just appear without a master plan?

*In the beginning God
In the beginning God created
Life exploded
In the beginning*

You got people telling us that science can answer all the questions;
Hows and whys
You got mockers scoffing at the bible thinking they are smart and Faith is blind
But the leap is so much greater to think chance is alone responsible
When I'm faced with love and beauty there's just one explanation plausible

Right at the start there was the Word
And the Word was with God
Right at the start the Word was God
Yes the Word was with God
And through Him everything was made
Nothing made without Him
In Him was life and that's the life
That is the light of all men
